

LEAKS: THE GRIM RESULT

An American CIA agent has been gunned down at his home in Athens, Greece, after an English-language newspaper fingered him along with other U.S. operatives. The paper got its information from "inside dope" helpfully supplied by sources here in the States.

The character of the Greek tipsters is obvious from the fact they also received a list of Soviet KGB agents, but declined to print it.

We hope this tragic incident will give Senate and House CIA snoops pause. Going public with details about CIA activities may not only blow operations, but also make marked men of our operatives.
